Here's a few thoughts from John Newell on this past weekend:

Speed-
- Keeping the boat flat and the helm unloaded was key. Hike hard! Especially off the starting line and in tight lanes. After the back stay is maxed out, ease the main sheet to unload the helm. Use weight movement downwind to steer the boat and avoid using the rudder (hand brake) to correct as much as possible.
-Timing and frequency of pumping downwind was very important. We had the most success when I would count down to the pump so the main and spinnaker got pumped together.

Tactics and Crew-
- It is a huge privilege to be able to sail with the crew I had. I was able to just focus on driving the boat all the time, which was key because the boat is very sensitive in conditions like we had. Owen called the tactics upwind while Mandy would call puffs. Downwind, I would look around a bit more, and talk to Owen about what he was feeling on the kite. Getting the boat surfing on the favored gybe was the priority.

The most important takeaways from the weekend...

-BCC members, staff, and sailing venue are fantastic.
-The Jones family are wonderful hosts.
-When your wife smacks herself in the face with a fully loaded spinnaker pole through a gybe, it's best to pretend like you didn't notice, keep the boat upright, and address it after the finish.
